Home Institution: Vietnam National University of Agriculture

Host Institution: Università degli studi di Camerino

Type of mobility: Student incoming mobility

Duration: 13/02/2024 to 13/07/2024

Description of the activities:

The University of Camerino's first and most striking feature is its clean, fresh atmosphere, as well as the warmth, friendliness, and enthusiasm of the Italian populace. I took part in the Food Technology major courses here, and I was quite impressed with the staff's professionalism, technological know-how, and depth of information. Along with providing hands-on lessons and experiences, the instructors have structured their instruction in a highly scientific manner. For me, this is a really worthwhile experience and something extremely amazing.

In order to address and debate common issues from a variety of angles, the University of Camerino also plans conferences and seminars that bring together experts from a variety of fields. For me, this is a really practical exercise, which makes it very significant.

In addition, I saw that the staff was really friendly and the dorm's amenities were excellent and comprehensive. The staff was really helpful when I needed support, as were the students. The international students are very friendly, they are always supportive of each other.

Here are a few photos I took while studying and having fun in Camerino.

I am grateful for the chance to study, work, and do research at the University of Camerino in Italy, which was made possible by the Vietnam National University of Agriculture, the University of Camerino, and the Erasmus+EU Scholarship Funds. I hope that more collaboration initiatives like this one will be available in the future, particularly from the University of Camerino, which is an excellent institution that I will suggest to my friends and other students if I ever intend to study in Italy.

Many thanks for it! I'm hoping to be able to go back to Camerino in the future to continue working and studying. I appreciate everything!
